National Nurses Week is underway, and I would like to thank all of our nurses and other medical professionals!

Our nurses work hard to meet the medical needs of youth, providing preventative care and treating a wide range of medical problems every day in our facilities. From health education to immunizations, acute illnesses, mental health conditions, and medical emergencies, these skilled professionals do it all!
The American Nurses Association has announced that the theme of this year’s National Nurses Week is “Nursing: The Balance of Mind, Body, and Spirit.” Service in juvenile corrections can be challenging, and life balance goes a long way in managing stress. As we support the well-being of one another, we are in a better position to support the health and well-being of our youth.

Please join me in thanking and celebrating all of our nurses!
